FOCUS ON... THE PATHWAY TO SALVATION

The roots of religious belief are concerned with what is best defined by the word "salvation" and the universal human experience that, in our deepest being, we realize and recognize that we cannot save ourselves. We need a Saviour because we realise intuitively that we cannot save ourselves. In fact, we might well say that there is outer world which we inhabit and an inner world of our being which is just as significant. We get on with living our lives day by day. But we have deep instincts which tell us that we are in need of a Saviour in order that our lives can be transformed for the better – because this is not something we can achieve in our own strength alone. In fact, it is said that many of us, if not all of us, do feel that we are not fully appreciated; that other people do not know what we are really like. And so, deep down, we feel that we are better than others realize. But, at the same time, we are glad that other people do not know what we are really like because we are fearful that others will discover that we are much worse than they realize. So there is an internal battle going on within us and we look to God to give us the strength of will and purpose to enable the light within us to flourish and the darkness to be banished. At the very heart of Christian belief is the conviction that Jesus undertook the work of achieving our salvation which required the outside intervention of God himself. And yet, when we look around at our world, we see that this work of salvation has yet to be made manifest in all its fullness. The world is yet to become the Kingdom of God in all its glory. So, we look to God to answer the aching in our soul, and to redeem what we cannot redeem, to bring to the fullness of fruition the New Dispensation which Malachi, the Messenger of God, prophesied; which John the Baptist proclaimed as the forerunner; which Jesus Christ embodied as the Messiah, the anointed suffering servant of the Living God.
